Fermentation Stories. An afternoon of knowledge sharing, collaborative practices and tasting
Workshop and discussion by artist Maya Minder
1–3 p.m.

The metabolic process that takes place in fermented food has a positive impact on the human gut bacteria. This microbial mechanism also tells us stories about food politics, self-sufficiency, small-scale and local production. The ferments on the table are in constant flux and illustrate the symbiotic coexistence between plants, animals and humans. Decomposition and composition are transferred to the table through the stains and the transformation of the table setting during the event. This laboratory of knowledge exchange is a practical exercise of un-learning and DIWO (Do it With Others). We became microbial in the sense of network thinking.

Radio Löwenbräukunst, ramp, level 0
2–6 p.m.

Radio Löwenbräukunst wants to be the conversation about art, in the form of music, lectures, dialogues, debates, and readings, spoken or sung, informative or performative. For Community Day 2023 at Löwenbräukunst, Joel Spiegelberg and gds.fm are presenting a radio program that deals with current topics in and around the art institution. This second edition comes with a new and varied program. It's time to talk art and culture again!

5–6 p.m. Live: DJ Sistaesta

Interactive tour for families
Experience art with all your senses!
11:30 a.m.–12 p.m.

In this tour for families we'll explore artworks in new ways! What does a work look like when we look at it upside down or when we're lying on the floor? Which work would you like to make a quick drawing of? Which artwork should we recreate with our bodies? Of course, we'll also talk about friendship, which is the topic of the two exhibitions, and ask ourselves what friends mean to us and how we show them that they're important to us. We're looking forward to seeing you there!
Children must be accompanied by adults.
Recommended for ages 3 to 12 (younger and older children are also welcome)

Löwenbräukunst Community Engagement

Löwenbräukunst Community Engagement creates lasting connections that go beyond individual visits. We bring art, ideas, and dialogues to classrooms, senior centers, and public institutions across the city. As a public art center, we are committed to ensuring that everyone has access to art and can benefit from it. Contemporary art should open our eyes and mind to new thoughts. Everyone should feel welcome at Löwenbräukunst, regardless of age and background.
